PROGRAM KHAS PEREMITAN PENDAPATAN YANG DISIMPAN DI LUAR NEGARA

Adalah dimaklumkan bahawa selaras dengan pembatalan pengecualian cukai ke atas pendapatan daripada punca luar negara sepetimana yang diumumkan oleh Menteri Kewangan melalui Bajet 2022, Lembaga Hasil Dalam Negeri Malaysia (HASiL) menawarkan Program Khas Peremitan Pendapatan (PKPP) kepada pemastautin di Malaysia yang mempunyai pendapatan yang disimpan di luar negara.

Program ini akan dilaksanakan berdasarkan kepada kriteria-kriteria yang berikut:

- (a) Tempoh pelaksanaan PKPP adalah mulai 1 Januari 2022 hingga 30 Jun 2022 (tempoh PKPP);
- (b) Kadar cukai 3% (kasar) ke atas pendapatan yang dibawa masuk dalam tempoh tersebut sepetimana yang dicadangkan di bawah Rang Undang-Undang Kewangan 2021;
- (c) Tiada semakan audit, siasatan atau penalti terhadap pendapatan yang dibawa masuk dalam tempoh PKPP, semua pendapatan yang dibawa masuk akan diterima secara suci hati oleh pihak HASiL;

- (d) Pendapatan hendaklah dibawa masuk / diremit dalam tempoh PKPP;
- (e) Pembayar cukai perlu membuat pengisytharan untuk menyertai PKPP selewat-lewatnya 30 hari selepas tamat tempoh PKPP;
- (f) Bayaran cukai hendaklah dibuat mengikut aturan pembayaran biasa yang telah ditetapkan bagi tahun taksiran 2022 atau 2023, yang mana berkenaan; dan
- (g) PKPP tidak melibatkan pendapatan yang terbit dari Malaysia yang tertakluk kepada cukai bagi tahun taksiran 2021 dan tahun-tahun taksiran seterusnya dan diremit atau dibawa balik dalam tempoh PKPP.

Selepas tamat tempoh tersebut, pihak HASiL akan menyemak dan meneliti maklumat-maklumat pendapatan pemastautin Malaysia yang disimpan di luar negara yang telah diterima melalui perjanjian pertukaran maklumat percukaian dengan negara-negara lain.

Sekiranya berdasarkan semakan, didapati pendapatan yang disimpan di luar negara yang berpunca dari Malaysia masih belum dilaporkan, taksiran tambahan boleh dibangkitkan berserta dengan penalti selaras dengan peruntukan Akta Cukai Pendapatan 1967.

Sehubungan itu, pihak HASiL menggalakkan pembayar cukai untuk menyertai program khas yang ditawarkan ini bagi mengemas kini kedudukan cukai mereka. Pihak HASiL akan mengeluarkan soalan lazim serta garis panduan berkaitan PKPP ini kepada umum yang boleh diperolehi di Portal Rasmi HASiL.

B. PENANGGUHAN BAYARAN CP204 DAN CP500 BAGI PMKS MULAI 1 JANUARI 2022 HINGGA 30 JUN 2022

Bil	Soalan	Jawapan
1.	Apakah kriteria perniagaan yang mendapat status PMKS?	Kriteria bagi PMKS ialah: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Mempunyai modal berbayar tidak melebihi RM2.5 juta bagi saham biasa pada permulaan tempoh asas bagi suatu tahun taksiran; dan - Mempunyai pendapatan kasar perniagaan berjumlah RM50 juta dan ke bawah bagi suatu tahun taksiran.
2.	Adakah entiti Perkongsian Liabiliti Terhad (PLT) juga layak memperoleh penangguhan cukai seperti yang diberi kepada PMKS? Sekiranya ya, apakah kriteria kelayakan PLT untuk memperoleh penangguhan tersebut?	Ya. Sesebuah PLT layak memperoleh penangguhan bayaran berdasarkan kriteria penentuan seperti yang termaktub di bawah Perenggan 2D, Jadual 1, ACP seperti berikut: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Jumlah maksimum sumbangan modal (tunai atau in-kind) tidak melebihi RM2.5 juta pada permulaan tempoh asas; dan • Jumlah pendapatan kasar daripada punca perniagaan tidak melebihi RM50 juta bagi tempoh asas
3.	Adakah penangguhan bayaran CP204 hanya layak untuk semua tempoh asas atau terhad kepada tempoh asas berakhir 31 Disember 2022 sahaja?	Penangguhan bayaran CP204 layak untuk semua tempoh asas sekiranya pembayar cukai masih mempunyai bayaran CP204 dalam tempoh penangguhan yang dibenarkan iaitu 1 Januari 2022 hingga 30 Jun 2022.
4.	Bagaimanakah kelayakan penangguhan bayaran ansuran CP204 ditentukan?	Kelayakan penangguhan bayaran CP204 ditentukan berdasarkan kepada kriteria PMKS seperti yang dinyatakan dalam Borang Nyata Cukai Pendapatan (BNCP) terkini yang diterima oleh LHDNM.
5.	Adakah pembayar cukai yang layak penangguhan bayaran CP204 dan CP500 perlu menjelaskan bayaran tertangguh secara sekaligus selepas tempoh penangguhan berakhir?	Tidak. Bayaran hendaklah dijelaskan semasa pengemukaan BNCP bagi tahun taksiran berkaitan sekiranya masih mempunyai baki cukai.
6.	Adakah kenaikan di bawah subseksyen 107B(3) dan 107C(9) ACP akan dikenakan	Tidak. Kenaikan di bawah subseksyen 107B(3) dan 107C(9) ACP juga tidak akan dikenakan

	kepada pembayar cukai yang mendapat penangguhan bayaran CP204 dan CP500?	jika bayaran dibuat tetapi berlaku kelewatan dalam tempoh penangguhan tersebut.
7.	Adakah bayaran CP204 dan CP500 yang telah dijelaskan dalam tempoh penangguhan boleh dibawa ke hadapan untuk menjelaskan bayaran CP204 dan CP500 selepas tamat tempoh penangguhan?	Tidak. Bayaran tersebut tidak dibenarkan untuk dibawa ke bulan selepas tamat tempoh penangguhan atau tahun taksiran berikutnya. Kenaikan di bawah subseksyen 107B(3) dan 107C(9) ACP juga tidak akan dikenakan jika berlaku kelewatan bayaran dalam tempoh penangguhan tersebut.
8.	Adakah pembayar cukai boleh memilih untuk menolak penangguhan bayaran CP204 dan CP500 secara automatik ini dan meneruskan bayaran seperti jadual bayaran ansuran asal? Sekiranya ya, adakah pembayar cukai perlu memaklumkan kepada pihak LHDNM?	Ya. Pembayar cukai boleh menolak penangguhan bayaran ansuran dengan terus membuat bayaran berdasarkan jadual ansuran dan tidak perlu memaklumkan kepada pihak LHDNM.
9.	Adakah pembayar cukai yang tertakluk kepada bayaran CP500 perlu membuat permohonan penangguhan bayaran?	Tidak. Pembayar cukai yang tertakluk kepada bayaran CP500 dibenarkan penangguhan bayaran CP500 mulai 1 Januari 2022 hingga 30 Jun 2022.
10.	Adakah pihak LHDNM akan mengeluarkan pemakluman kepada pembayar cukai yang layak mendapat penangguhan bayaran CP204 dan CP500 ini?	Pemakluman hanya akan dikeluarkan kepada pembayar cukai yang memenuhi kriteria PMKS berdasarkan maklumat yang dinyatakan dalam BNCP terkini dan mempunyai emel berdaftar dengan LHDNM. Pembayar cukai yang baharu memenuhi kriteria PMKS atau tidak mempunyai emel berdaftar dengan LHDNM tidak akan menerima pemakluman tersebut. Walau bagaimanapun, tiada pemakluman penangguhan bayaran CP500 kepada pembayar cukai kerana penangguhan adalah dibenarkan kepada semua secara automatik.
11.	Adakah penangguhan bayaran CP204 boleh dibenarkan kepada pembayar cukai yang memenuhi syarat penangguhan tetapi tidak menerima pemakluman kerana tidak mempunyai emel berdaftar dengan LHDNM?	Ya. Pembayar cukai dibenarkan untuk penangguhan bayaran CP204 tertakluk kepada permohonan dan pemberitahuan dikemukakan melalui e-mel ke alamat seperti berikut: penangguhancp204@hasil.gov.my Ini adalah signifikan sebagai rekod kepada LHDNM untuk tidak mengenakan kenaikan di bawah subseksyen 107C(9) ACP.
12.	Adakah pembayar cukai yang layak mendapat penangguhan boleh memfailkan	Ya.

	pindaan kepada CP204 pada bulan ke-6 dan / atau bulan ke-9 dan / atau bulan ke-11 tempoh asas yang jatuh dalam tempoh penangguhan atau membuat pindaan kepada CP500 sebelum 30 Jun 2022?
13.	Adakah pembayar cukai yang tertakluk kepada CP500 masih akan menerima CP500 bagi Tahun Taksiran 2022?	Ya. Walau bagaimanapun pembayar cukai dibenarkan untuk tidak membuat bayaran dalam tempoh penangguhan (Januari, Mac dan Mei 2022).

How to give and receive praise at work

01 Dec 2021

Nearly 70 per cent of people experience some degree of anxiety about giving and receiving praise.

Praise is vital to maintaining positive work relationships. Here are tips on delivering praise at work.

Why do compliments often make us cringe with self-consciousness?

While some people are adept at graciously accepting positive feedback \(/articles/2020/12/01/performance-reviews-feedback\) and bask in the warm glow of recognition, some are left feeling a little uncomfortable.

Nearly 70 per cent of people experience some degree of anxiety \(/articles/2021/07/07/7-ways-manage-work-anxiety\) about giving and receiving praise, according to research \(https://hbr.org/2019/10/how-to-give-and-receive-compliments-at-work\) by Christopher Littlefield, the founder of workplace recognition consultancy Beyond Thank You \(https://beyondthankyou.com/\).

Yet, the same research has found that 88 per cent of respondents associate praise with feeling valued.

"When we hear that we're doing a good job at work, it sends a signal to us that we matter, and that is crucial to relationships," says Littlefield.

"Most of the conflicts I see in organisations are the result of people not feeling valued.

"Their boss may actually appreciate them, but if the employee doesn't know that, it often turns into resentment, followed by distrust and disengagement \(/articles/2021/11/01/how-to-re-enthuse-and-re-motivate-employees\)."

What makes praise so tricky?

Littlefield believes that part of the awkwardness stems from being unsure how to respond – training courses typically do not focus on praise. In contrast, delivering criticism is considered an art to be mastered.

Praise is also intimate, and that can spark feelings of embarrassment.

"Someone is sharing how they feel about us, or how they experienced something we did, and often the person is seeing something that we didn't see, or didn't want them to see," he explains.

"They're also sharing an opinion of something that we didn't expect, and oftentimes it conflicts with our own paradigm of ourselves."

Some people simply believe that they ought not to accept praise; that there is something inherently wrong with doing so, says Jacqueline Whitmore \(<https://etiquetteexpert.com/>\), international etiquette expert and founder of The Protocol School of Palm Beach.

"From an early age, most of us have been taught to remain humble and not be arrogant, egotistical or too proud," she says.

"Some people feel unworthy or undeserving, while others try to deflect attention from themselves. Some people undervalue the importance of their contributions. Some feel more comfortable putting the spotlight on others instead of themselves."

Silence the inner critic

Littlefield calls out the “tall poppy syndrome”, which tends to discourage people from accepting compliments, because standing out might be perceived as negative. “We learn to avoid recognition, because we fear being excluded from the group.

“We forget that when people are recognising us, they actually want us to feel good,” he says.

Those who consistently struggle with accepting praise may be paying too much attention to what self-development consultant, coach and author Angela Di Paola (<https://angeladipaola.com/>) calls “that darn inner critic.”

“Many of us have an inner critic who tells us that we’re not good enough and will never accomplish our goals. It comes from many different sources: it could be past experiences of having failed or being put down.

The inner critic “feeds on our emotions and insecurities, and makes it very difficult to accept compliments because we think the person must be being insincere.”

However, deflecting or rejecting a compliment comes with the risk of undermining the person who is giving it – they may even walk away feeling insulted.

There is also the possibility of appearing falsely modest or guilty of an irritating “humble brag” (“I hate my Ferrari! Police are always pulling me over just because it’s a Ferrari, and they assume I’m speeding when I’m not!”).

Praise gone wrong

When Littlefield set out to discover the best types of compliments, he realised that people were more interested in telling him about the worst compliments they had encountered. He interviewed 400 people on the Boston subway and subsequently identified what he describes as “ineffective recognition practices”.

The most common is buttering someone up with a compliment and then asking them for a favour, or the sandwich feedback model, whereby two hollow compliments are given in between a “slice” of criticism.

Another is “pity praise”; for example, a colleague bombs a presentation but, instead of acknowledging this, we pretend it went well. Each approach is inauthentic.

“When we do these things, we actually break down the relationships that we were looking to build,” he says.

“Instead of giving a compliment on the fly, pause and think for a second. What behaviour did you see that had an impact on you? Be specific.”

Also consider how the person would wish to receive the praise. They may not enjoy being the centre of attention, in which case it would be preferable to send them an email or a voice message, rather than addressing them in a group setting.

Less is more

If you’re feeling unsure about how to respond to praise, Littlefield suggests keeping it simple. This is far preferable to awkwardly trying to deflect or reject the praise, or countering with a compliment of your own.

“A gracious reply to a compliment is simply saying, ‘Thank you’. If it really meant something, you could add, ‘That’s really great to hear’,” suggests Littlefield.

Di Paola says it can also help to consider the other person’s perspective. “Take a step back and a deep breath and recognise that people actually don’t have to compliment you, so when they do, it is generally coming from a good place.

Recognise that they themselves are being vulnerable by giving you that compliment.”

How to have difficult conversations at work

08 Dec 2021

Often what makes conversations challenging is the discomfort we feel in anticipation of the interaction.

By NICOLA HEATH

With end-of-year performance reviews underway, many managers are preparing for conversations with team members. Not all of these will be easy or pleasant. We asked experts for practical tips on how to best approach difficult conversations and use them to effect positive change. Read on.

No matter how much you might want to avoid a potentially tense interaction, difficult conversations are an unavoidable part of working life.

Delivering bad news – whether a complaint, a performance issue, a rejection or a refusal – is sometimes necessary to resolve conflict, improve productivity or meet strategic goals or compliance requirements.

The good news is that a challenging conversation, handled with forethought and sensitivity, can have a positive effect on team dynamics and culture.

Karen Dillon, former editor of the Harvard Business Review and author of the HBR Guide to Office Politics, offers this advice: “If you find ways to navigate difficult conversations, your colleagues will come to respect your candour and your ability to work through a problem without making it personal.”

“And when you conduct difficult conversations, you’re contributing to an environment where having hard talks, offering different points of view and giving honest feedback are accepted – and that is better for everyone and your organisation as a whole.”

Before the conversation

Often what makes conversations challenging is the discomfort we feel in anticipation of the interaction. Fortunately, your mindset going into the exchange is under your control.

Leadership expert and founder of BoldHR (<https://boldhr.com.au/>), Rebecca Houghton, coaches her clients to reflect on three key points before they launch into a difficult conversation – first, that “this person is a good person” who has been trying their best; second, that I also have a role to play in whatever has gone wrong; and third that “all is not what it appears – whatever information I have, it is inconclusive until I have heard from them”.

Houghton says that keeping these points front of mind ensures you approach the discussion with “appreciative enquiry” and an open mind rather than judgement.

“You’re taking joint accountability, so it’s a conversation about what ‘we’ could do rather than what ‘you’ should do, which is a lot more accusatory.”

During the conversation

Many people assume they can be either honest or kind when delivering unwelcome news, but not both at the same time. This is not the case, says Dr Ruchi Sinha (<https://people.unisa.edu.au/ruchi.sinha>), organisational psychologist and senior lecturer at the University of South Australia’s School of Management.

“They decide to be straightforward and blunt,” she says. “They think that’s being genuine and authentic, because they are being honest.”

However, “there is no reason why truth can’t be delivered with kindness and compassion,” Sinha says. Set a neutral tone and acknowledge the challenging nature of the forthcoming discussion.

When offering feedback, keep it concise and focused.

“Don’t use broad generic terms like ‘good’ or ‘bad’ and ‘effective’ or ‘ineffective’, because they don’t tell you ‘what’ and ‘why’,” says Sinha, who recommends zeroing in on two or three issues rather than enumerating a long “laundry list” of criticism.

“When you give feedback, and you want someone to learn and improve, you have to keep it focused. Keep it to [the] most relevant and salient points.”

Sinha also advises following up perceived concerns or problems with potential solutions.

"Providing resources and avenues to improve is what makes feedback constructive," she says.

Dillon cautions against engaging in a difficult conversation when tensions are running high. "If you are so angry that you can't control your emotions, you are not in a good frame of mind for a discussion," she says.

"You'll say the wrong thing, embarrass yourself or your colleague, or create awkward scenes for others."

If either party loses their cool (/articles/2018/03/01/resolving-office-conflict) during the discussion, Sinha advises taking a break and rescheduling the meeting for a later time, when everyone is calm and has had time to reflect on the issues.

Adopt a peer-to-peer approach

Seniority is not licence to talk down to a team member. In today's workplace, there is much less tolerance for the "master-commander relationship", says Houghton, who has observed a shift in the collective psyche in recent years, particularly during the pandemic, that has come to reject traditional hierarchy.

Employees are "not interested in being told what to do or treated like a naughty child," she says. Instead, people want autonomy in the workplace and for their voices to be heard. This affects how you should frame your message.

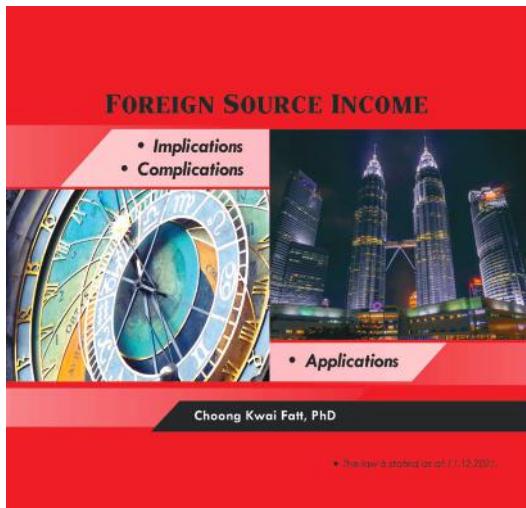

"Instead of saying, 'This is what you must do', you are saying, 'I've seen this, and I'm wondering if there's something wrong.'"

Follow up with a question about what you can do to help, and what a good outcome might look like, offers Houghton.

"You are engaging that person in a peer-to-peer style conversation," she says. "You are asking for their opinion, you are asking for their input, you are giving them the autonomy they crave, you are showing them respect, you are not judging them. Ultimately, you are not telling them what to do – you're coaching them to come up with their own solution."
